THE COVER

The undergraduates (most of whom, we hope, will become graduates) are occasionally featured on the cover of the Alumni Journal. This year's colorful production of South Pacific provides another opportunity, especially welcome because the Glee Club has been a student enterprise of great importance over the years. Gerry Cairns, Winnipeg Free Press photographer, took the striking color photograph of three fair members of the cast at the final dress rehearsal.

The Seventh Alumni Conference

AS we go to press the Alumni winter conference has taken place, to go down in the history of the association as the most successful, in a great many respects, of the seven conferences held to date.

The topic was "Canada—One Nation or Two?" and the keynote speakers (the Hon. Maurice Sauve, the recently named minister of Forestry, and Jean-Luc Pepin, M.P.) brought inspiration, much food for thought and sparkling Gallic wit for the nearly four hundred delegates.

We shall not try to report on the conference here and now. We shall attempt that in the next issue of the Journal, giving the attention and space which the importance of the subject deserves. Let us only say that we not only hope, but that we are now confident, that the day's discussions will achieve one objective referred to in the printed conference program—"that discussions . . . will help pave the way for well-considered and useful representations to the Royal Commission (on Bilingualism and Biculturalism)."

Manitoba Students Set New Scholarship Record

WE have been reporting to graduates for two or three years that the students today—while still young and gay, at times, and almost as "collegiate" as we were in our time—are showing signs of a more serious approach to knowledge.

Circulation of books in the university library continues to rise at a greater rate than the number of students; library reading space, though greatly enlarged, is at a premium all year and not for just two or three weeks before exams; lights burn all about the campus far into the night—many buildings do not shut down at five or six o'clock as once was the case.

There are still students who fail, students who merely scrape through and some (as was the case with most of us) who come somewhere around the middle. But there seem to be to us at least, more now who become real students, who become so engrossed in their courses that they study with a joy and an eagerness rather than slavishly to prepare for examinations.

Last year when the Woodrow Wilson Fellowships were announced, the University of Manitoba was represented by nine young people (one of them from United college). These were students who the Fellowship award committee considered outstanding prospects as future university teachers. It was a record for Manitoba. This year, Manitoba produced fifteen Woodrow Wilson winners (four from United), to stand second only to the much larger University of Toronto (23) and equal to the also larger University of British Columbia in the number of successful candidates. The university, colleges and graduates can be proud.

Tax Benefit for American Friends

After many months of negotiation with U.S. tax authorities, The American Friends of the University of Manitoba, Inc., 301 Garrick Building, St. Paul, Minn., recently received approval for exemption from U.S. federal income taxes. This means that this organization may issue tax deductible receipts for contributions received from U.S. residents.

The Internal Revenue Service ruled that contributions made to the American Friends prior to October 14, 1963, were not deductible. However, at that date, a change in the articles of incorporation gave sole control in carrying out the program and objectives of the American Friends to its directors, all residents of the United States. This made possible the favorable ruling.

Graduates living in the United States will soon receive a mailing from The American Friends of the University of Manitoba and further information may be obtained from this organization.

President Reports to Alumni on Capital Fund. University Board Hears of Expanding Graduate Activities

SUCCESS of the University of Manitoba's Capital Fund was reported to members of the Alumni Association board of directors at the joint meeting, on Thursday, February 20, with members of the university Board of Governors.

President Hugh H. Saunderson spoke for the university board at the informal discussion which followed a dinner in the faculty area of the new university dining room. Ross Donald, president of the Alumni Association, then told the governors of some of the association's notable achievements of the past year.

As the press had already reported, the Capital Fund had passed a total of $3,800,000, Dr. Saunderson said. He wished to emphasize the part that graduates of the university had played in pushing the total far beyond its minimum objective of $3,200,000 to a point nearing the $4,000,000 figure, set by the provincial government as the maximum on which it would make a two dollar contribution for every dollar raised on a voluntary basis.

The graduates had been vital to the fund organization, the president said, and their part in its success went far beyond the actual showing of dollars in alumni donations. These donations now stood very close to the mark of $500,000, set out as a goal for alumni giving in the campaign. Alumni gifts included not only those received through the alumni section of the canvass but many from graduates in other categories (university faculty, for instance). The support and the work of graduates was sincerely appreciated and the president expressed, through the alumni board, his warm thanks to all concerned.

THE president then discussed the new major-minor program of studies to be introduced in Arts and Science in the 1964-65 session and he gave some details. Students would take 15 courses in the three year general degree program, of which five would be in their major subject (one in the first year, two in the second and two in the third). One course would be taken in each year in the minor subject. He referred to other aspects of the program: that five different subjects would be taken in the first year; that a B.A. program required at least one science course (and two new special courses, in biological sciences and the physical sciences, were being introduced); that all students, for either the Arts or Science degree, would take at least three courses from a basic humanities group. The program was being introduced to enable students to concentrate and study to greater depth their chosen major subject.

The president also announced the start this Fall of a degree program in Physical Education, a development brought about by a tremendous demand for Phys Ed graduates, particularly for teaching in schools. Those wishing to take such work had previously been obliged to do their specialized studies in another province or in the United States. The Manitoba course, he noted, would require a sequence on the academic side in addition to Physical Education courses.

ALUMNI ACTIVITIES

MR. Donald suggested that, because the university subsidized the Alumni association program to the extent of more than $30,000 a year, the governors would be interested to know some of the results of this support. He referred particularly to the following activities:

1) The association maintained records and mailing services for approximately 25,000 graduates—a list growing substantially every year—and maintained a contact with the university through publication of the Alumni Journal, sent to all graduates of record. The graduates played an important part in financing the association. In the past year a record number of about 8,000 had sent in approximately $16,000 in dues.

2) The “Search for Talent” program, started seven years ago on the suggestion of the then chancellor, Dr. Sifton, had grown year by year and more than $50,000, contributed by alumni, had assisted more than 200 high school students to enter the university and colleges. An important feature of the program, possibly as important as the financial help given, was the counsel and encouragement given to high school students throughout the province by more than 100 alumni interviewers.

3) Three years ago, Lionel Orlikow, then a member of the Alumni board, had taken the initiative in launching an orientation program for high school students. This had begun with one course. In the second year of the program, four courses attracted 100 students. Early this year, at a series of successive Saturday morning sessions, 600 high school students learned something of the work in 16 different university faculties, schools and departments. (See page 12.)

4) The activities committee, in addition to a successful bonspiel, had arranged two conferences, one in the Fall of 1963, another to be held soon (and on which the activities chairman would report).

5) A little publicized but very successful activity was conducted by the Continuing Studies committee. Before Christmas there had been a capacity attendance at a series of Saturday lectures on Yeats and Lawrence, by Professor Geoffrey Durrant, of the English department. Now in progress was a series by Professor Jack Stevenson, of the Philosophy department—with, again, more than 50 alumni and other interested people enrolled.

THE final report came from Earle B. Pollard, activities chairman, who noted that early registrations indicated a record attendance for the Seventh Alumni Conference on March 7. Hon. Maurice Sauve, federal minister of Forestry, and Jean-Luc Pepin, parliamentary assistant to the minister of Trade and Commerce, would be the keynote speakers on the theme: Canada, One Nation or Two? There would be discussion groups and, at the closing afternoon session, a panel which would comment on the day's proceedings. The conferences had been introduced to provide an opportunity for graduates and others in the community to consider and discuss topics of public interest and also to bring the university and the community closer together.

The chancellor of the university, Mr. Justice Samuel Freedman, expressed appreciation to alumni for the spirit of the association. While he could not say that the association was doing all that it possibly could, he felt that its record, as compared with other Alumni associations, was a proud one. The university was an educational institution and the alumni were to be commended for giving educational activities a priority.

ROOM WITH A VIEW

This is the view from the penthouse of the new 10-storey women's residence on the Fort Garry campus, due for opening in September. The penthouse will include the residents' lounge. The 250-bed facility will be linked to the new food service building, opened in January. Male students will take over all of the old 600-bed residence. Pictures of the new food facilities and residence buildings and other buildings under construction appear on the following pages. New buildings represent an $8,000,000 investment.

Medicine will open this new building in the Fall. The ground floor houses offices, the four upper floors research space for the rapidly expanding department of Pharmacology.

Below, an "associated" college, St. Andrew's, has risen on the campus. Only Ukrainian Greek Orthodox institution of its kind in the world, it has residence accommodation for 107 students, as well as dining hall, gymnasium, offices, library and some lecture rooms. It is due for opening early this summer. Initially it will serve the university only in providing residence facilities and a centre for Ukrainian Orthodox students.

Orientation Program Aids

BY KIP PARK

MORE than 600 high school students from 43 Manitoba schools learned something of what makes a university tick during an orientation program held for them in January and February.

In special Saturday morning classes eager Grade 12 students from Winnipeg and from points as far away as Gimli and Emerson learned how university lectures are given and what will be expected of them once they become university students. Professors and lecturers of 16 faculties, schools and departments of the University of Manitoba illustrated some of the elementary principles involved in each subject. Courses varied in length, from one to five sessions.

The program, sponsored and organized by the Alumni Association in co-operation with university authorities, was the third one in four years. It was developed because of concern of some of the graduates and the first pilot program in 1961 brought together 27 students from city high schools who attended a series of three lectures in the department of Actuarial Mathematics and Statistics. The response was so enthusiastic that the program hasn't stopped growing. The second series, in 1962, involved just over 100 students and four university faculties and departments.

It is an attempt to forestall the "hit and miss" type of decision by entering students to college or university in selecting their fields of study. It was felt by members of the Alumni Association board of directors and by university administration and academics that many high school students have no idea of the nature and scope of various university courses, particularly those not on the high school curriculum.

Too often courses decided upon—even when a student had confidently chosen his faculty—were selected on a basis of blindly poking a finger at the calendar or of choosing courses which fitted conveniently into a timetable—preferably one with no Saturday lectures.

And high school students have had few ways of gaining reliable information about what to expect in university. Friends of Grade 12 students still in high school, who went to university, passed on occasional tidbits of information about first year university, but too often friendships waned in the gulf between school and university. With university entrance requirement being upped to senior matriculation this fall even this slim pipeline will disappear, leaving the poor high school student without a clue as to what goes on at the Fort Garry campus.

IN his opening address to the students at the start of this year's orientation program on January 25, Dr. H. H. Saunderson, the university's president, warned them that they were probably a bit confused about the future but "this program will enable you to see some of the complexity of higher education. Do not forget that a university exists to help in training young people to give their contribution to the world. We hope that this program will help you to get the most out of that training."

Then, following guides, the high school students trooped off to the selected departments to learn of some of the mysteries the university holds in store for them. Some peered through microscopes at human blood or frogs' livers while others learned the principles of heredity and the behavior of insects. At the Faculty of

At right, President Saunderson welcomes students. Seated are Elizabeth Redmond, the Alumni orientation chairman, and Chief Inspector Robert Lightly, Manitoba department of education.

Below, some of the visiting students.

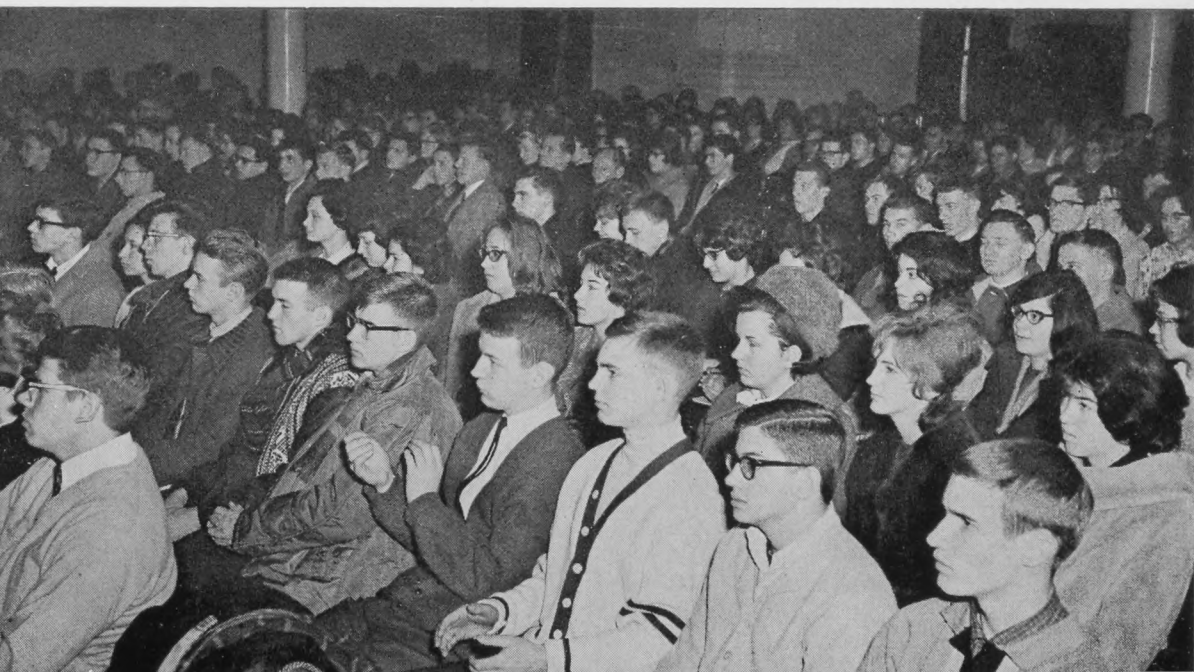

Dentistry students observed new teaching techniques over closed-circuit television equipment and learned what is involved in the treatment of crooked teeth.

The complexities of "brain washing" were illustrated for students attending the psychology lectures, while those in anthropology discussed the origins of mankind. Students attending the geology lecture learned about how the earth itself began.

From all reports received, this year's orientation program went off as well, if not better than those in previous years. Students showed keen interest and professors were pleased with their reactions. Full effect of the program will never really be known, however. Eventual decisions of students enrolled in the program may very well be tabulated, but it is impossible to know how they in turn may affect other students in the schools, not participating, but with whom they may discuss their experiences.

The Alumni Association is now canvassing members of the university departments involved, the high school guidance teachers and the students themselves for an evaluation of the 1964 program. Many favorable comments and some suggestions for future changes are being received.

One suggestion is that the courses not all be run at the same time but that some of them, at least, consecutively, so that students may be able to sample work in more than one field of study. Certainly this suggestion will be considered when future plans are discussed.

The perplexing choice that students had to make when all programs were run at once is seen in the outline of courses which were given—an outline which was submitted to the students beforehand as a basis for their choice.

From Princess Ida . . .

THE GLEE CLUB STORY

IN 37 years of productions—from Gilbert and Sullivan to Rodgers and Hammerstein—University of Manitoba Glee Club productions have sparkled with the verve of youth and have achieved a surprisingly high excellence of performance. And don't let the 1964 cast of South Pacific tell you that they had more fun doing the show than those who ventured on stage with the Glee Club's first performance of The Mikado in 1928.

Some scenes from the latest production, South Pacific, which ran for a week in January, are shown on the opposite page:

At top: Nellie Forbush (Elizabeth Wallace-Gorrie), with nurses. Nellie—and you may recognize the scene—is obviously and madly “in love with a wonderful guy.”

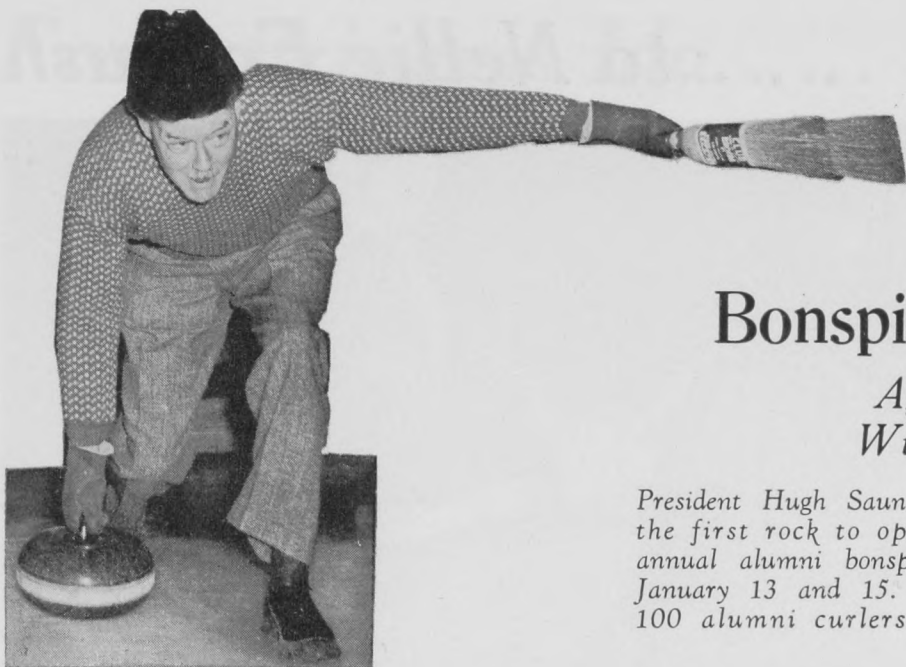

Next pictures: Nellie (who has been washing the guy right out of her hair) is seen with the subject of her vacillating feelings, Emile DeBecque (sung by Georges LaFleche). At right: Bloody Mary (Heather Robertson) introduces Lieutenant Cable (Harold Kroeker) to her lovely daughter, Liat (Marsha Aaron).

At bottom, the lively men's chorus gives out with the rousing “Bloody Mary.”

The 1964 producer was Dave Robertson, musical director Bob McMullin. Much of the burden of producing the highly successful show fell on the slight shoulders of the never-ruffled chairman of the Glee Club committee, Margaret Koch.

Back in 1959 the Alumni Journal published a photo submitted by an interested graduate, J. M. Benson, of Montreal. The old gates at the main Matheson avenue entrance had gone and the prospect was bare. Finally, in 1963, some funds were found for new gates, shown above—a part only of an entrance design by Professor Jack Graham, of the Faculty of Architecture. We thought Mr. Benson would like to know. Note flower beds by the highway in the foreground.

On February 27 the university was honored by a visit from His Excellency Max de la Fuente, Ambassador to Canada from Peru, and Senora de la Fuente. His Excellency presented books to the university library. In photo, the distinguished visitors, at left, with President Saunderson and Vaughan L. Baird, BA/49, LLB, consul in Winnipeg for Peru.

now head at Brandon college, as acting head for two years.

Professor Barber succeeds Professor W. J. Waines, who relinquished his departmental duties after his appointment as the university's vice-president for academic affairs. Born at Wolseley, Sask., Professor Barber received his B.A. from the University of Saskatchewan in 1939, his Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota in 1952. He joined the staff of the department of Economics at Manitoba in 1949, after a year at McMaster university and three years with the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. He directed research for the Royal Commission on Flood-Cost-Benefit and wrote the final report of the commission. For one year, 1959-60, he served as special adviser to the Government of the Philippines on National Income Statistics.

Professor Donnelly succeeds Dr. C. R. Hiscocks, who has resigned and will devote his time to writing. Professor Donnelly, born in 1919 in Port George, a Nova Scotia fishing village, attended Mount Allison university, where he received his B.A. in 1940. He then attended the University of Toronto where he received his M.A. in 1946, his Ph.D. in 1956. He came to Western Canada in 1948, teaching at the University of Saskatchewan before joining the University of Manitoba in 1950. His writings include the recent book, The Government of Manitoba.

Professor Durrant will take over from Professor A. Lloyd Wheeler, who retires after the current session. Professor Durrant came to the University of Manitoba in 1961 from South Africa, where he had been professor and head of the department of English at the University of Natal since 1945. Born in Chesterfield, England, he is a graduate of Cambridge, with the M.A. degree, and holds an Education Diploma from the University of London. Before his Natal appointment, he taught at Durham university, the University of Tubingen and the University of Stellenbosch. During the war he served in military intelligence. He has been active as a writer and broadcaster. His departure to Canada from South Africa for political reasons was described as "an irreparable loss to South African academic circles."

A graduate of the University of Manitoba (B.A., 1942, and M.A., 1951), Professor Smith will take over the History department from Professor W. L. Morton, who is relinquishing these administrative duties to take over the office of Provost of the new University college, to be opened in the Fall of this year. Brandon Appeal

An appeal to Alumni Journal readers for books for the Brandon College library, especially material pertaining to Western Manitoba, has been issued by Miss E. M. McFadden, the librarian at the college.

She suggests that some "dusty attics" may harbor useful material: scholarly books and pamphlets published in Canada, by Canadians, about Canada; speeches, political pamphlets, travel guides, documents outlining the origin, development and policies of Canadian organizations and institutions; atlases and maps; Canadian works of literary merit.
